My name is Dolores Borg and I come from the Mediterranean Island of Malta.

I have been working as an Environmental Health Officer in Malta for the last 11 years. My studies in Environmental Health started by obtaining a Diploma; and then an Honours Degree in Environmental Health at the University of Malta. Subsequently, to further enhance my academic standing I decided to study for an MSc at Strathclyde University.

The MSc course was very interesting, wide ranging and covered new topics including Acoustics and Contaminated Land Reclamation. I was invited by another student to visit Dumfries and Galloway Council in Stranraer to obtain first-hand experience in Environmental Health work in Scotland and to meet other colleagues. The lecturers, staff and students were very helpful and friendly. It was an interesting and fulfilling year and I am positive that the experience and knowledge gained will help me in my career as an Environmental Health Officer.

“an interesting and fulfilling year”