A short induction into the main features of the programme. Discussion of the professional focus, subjects covered and materials helpful in completing the programme.

Reading list

Module leaders and experts teaching on the programme will release ahead of each seminar a list of required readings that each student will have to undertake in preparation for the discussions in class. In addition, a more extensive list of 'further readings' will also be provided for your own consideration and research.

You will find more details in the LLM Handbook and in the Module handbooks for each one of the modules (compulsory and electives) that you will be taking.

Mandatory and Elective classes

Mandatory classes: Mandatory classes include - Law and Practice of Construction Management; Dispute Resolution; Law of the Construction Industry. In addition, non-lawyers will take Legal Process & the Law of Contract while students with a legal background will take Context of Construction.

When students take each of the mandatory electives will be determined by the specific programme which they are enrolled.

Elective class: All students will take a total of two electives courses during the full length of their programme.

Full-time students will choose two electives in semester 2 of the one-year programme; part-time students will choose one elective either in semester 1 or 2 of the second year of the programme.
